About Hutto

Welcome to Hutto, Texas, known as "Hippo Nation" for its beloved hippo mascot, its small-town charm, and its reputation as one of the fastest-growing and safest communities in the Lone Star State. Tucked into prestigious Williamson County, Hutto sits just seven miles east of Round Rock and less than 30 miles from downtown Austin, blending small-town charm with the accessibility and opportunities of the Greater Austin metropolitan area. Once rooted in agriculture, its economy has blossomed alongside booming Central Texas, now welcoming high-tech, manufacturing, and service employers. Pair that with quality schools, growing parks and retail, and a short commute to the capital, and it's easy to see why Money Magazine named Hutto one of the Top 50 Places to Live in the United States in 2023.

No introduction to Hutto is complete without its most famous resident. As local legend goes, a circus train stopped at the depot in 1915 when a hippopotamus escaped into nearby Cottonwood Creek, prompting the now-iconic telegram, "Stop trains! Hippo loose in Hutto." The town embraced the tale, adopting the hippo as its mascot by 1923. Today, hippos have become a beloved symbol of Hutto, with thousands of uniquely decorated concrete hippos displayed throughout the community. While estimates vary, it's reasonable to say there are between 5,000 and 10,000 scattered across the city. The City's official mascot, Howdy the Hippo, also makes appearances at community events, celebrating Hutto's unique identity. With its rich history, welcoming spirit, and "Building the Future" motto, Hutto honors its past while growing toward tomorrow.
